

A LITERACY INITIATIVE BY RMA BY OLUSHOLA

Read and Rise

“A book moved on is a book that gets to keep doing its work.”

Read and Rise began with a simple observation: across Nigerian homes, shelves quietly fill up with books that have already given everything they had to give to one reader, while not far away, a classroom, a library, or a young person is going without. We started Read and Rise to close that gap — gathering the books our own households had outgrown and finding them a second life where they're still needed.

This isn't about charity in the abstract. It's about accountability — the same value at the heart of everything we do at RMA by Olushola. Just as we believe people deserve the information to take charge of their health, we believe students deserve the materials to take charge of their education. Every title on these pages was checked, sorted, and matched by hand to a shelf where it could be useful again: a university library building its collection, a campus foundation supporting students, or a school still waiting for its turn.

What follows is the full record — every book that has found a new home, and every book still waiting for one.
